

Amazonian Stories

The Amazonia stories were not written for publication, but for a limited virtual community, and even now, they are mainly meant for members of the euro-sappho and rogue mailing lists.

Please do not link or advertise these stories elsewhere!

A Note about the nature of these stories:

The Amazonian stories, written on the euro-sappho mailing list, were originally fantasy and reality in one: references were made to ongoing and/or past threads and postings, prominent or less prominent contributors to the list were playing roles, etc. Gradually, the story telling evolved into creating our own Utopia: A parallel world situated in the virtual space of Amazonia. This virtual space gives us the opportunity to do as we please: e.g., stories can run in parallel, are not necessarily interconnected, and not necessarily in chronological order. There need not be an agreement about names, customs, history etc. or even about what Amazonia means.

These stories are experiments with collective writing, for fun. It is likely that they were written quickly and without endless editing, most probably leaving something to be desired on the level of exact phrasing, writing mistakes and idiomatic language use. However, it is the story in general that counts: outline, characters, wit, plot, suspense, etc.
